To whom it may concern:

I write this letter to express my concerns with the proposal to remove Title II classification from Internet Service Providers (ISPs), and eliminate so-called "net neutrality". The removal of such Title II classification from ISPs would be detrimental to the American people and have harmful economic consequences for American businesses, especially small businesses. Such declassification would be a blatant act of cronyism and political corruption that would clearly and painfully show that the Federal Communications Commission shows preferential favour, not to the greater American people, but to the select few business executives who stand to directly profit from such declassification.

It is thus imperative that for the preservation of entrepreneurial growth, maintaining a competitive market, and the wishes of the American people, that ISPs should continue to be classified as common carriers and regulated under Title II of the Communications Act of 1934, codified as 47 U.S.C. § 151 et seq.
